

Most of the work time was spent towing divers along the shore line between the coordinates provided searching for the milfoil. The milfoil was “scattered” and as individual plants or small groups were found the diver would hand pick the milfoil, and in a few cases the boat would stop to use the DASH system. A very small portion of the area had milfoil pulled.